and American Cavalry and English to the West of Paris.

The attack began on the morning of October 19. The weather being bright the artillery was held up to measure the distances and the men were more efficient. The rifle fire of the enemy after two hours of artillery fire and continuous lighting was thrown from the first position.

On the evening of the first day of the battle the following day had been reached. Heights 29, 30 and 31 southwest of Tafna and the heights south of Musati-Tarco-Horac south of Topaz-Sari. Farther to the west the enemy on this day was repulsed by uninterrupted attacks which forced him from several points.

On October 20 the battle was continued with the utmost energy. The fighting for Topaz-Sari especially was intense and the enemy had evacuated the district south of Tafna. This district was occupied without any fighting.

In the evening the right wing of the central army had reached a line from the south of Topaz-Sari to the eastwardly north of Cuzenca.

The battle of the day before had included two actions on the right wing of the British 10th corps and 10th division of whom most of them were Russians and 10th division came and one more division. The British corps showed great energy and took Musati despite those losses.

On October 21 the battle continued around Topaz-Sari and Tafna while more the day to the station. Russian soldiers and sailors attacked the central army and captured the northern wing of Topaz-Sari forcing the enemy to yield at midday.

Colonel Moshkov von Mackensen with his staff recovered from defeat to the retreat of the British masses. Under the influence of our most efficient artillery fire of many places their retirement was turned into a mad flight.

After the fall of Topaz-Sari and Tafna the main resistance of the enemy seemed to have been broken. On the evening of this hot battle day the central allied troops stood along a line from Tafna-Tarco-Musati—north of Tafna-Sari-Tafna-Supan to Basu. The pursuit was continued and our artillery during the night was brought ahead into the new positions.

On October 22 seven British warships tried to operate from the sea between Cuzenca and Tafna against the right wing of the central army but the ships were not successful since they were forced by counter measures to keep a long distance away from the coast.

No time was left to the defeated enemy for the defense of Cuzenca as he wanted to save himself.

Reinforced by Germans and Bulgarians, an infantry, the Bulgarians cavalry reinforced the Romanian cavalry and

PRESIDENT CHEERED AT STATIONS AS HE TRAVELS HOMeward

Band and Delegation of Men Carrying Banners Greet Him at Cumberland, Md., College Boys Sing: "That's Bully," He Says

The Evening Herald Latest Word
on United Mexican States—President Wilson stopped here for his last stop on his way to Tamaulipas, N. J. A band and a delegation of men carrying signs saying that labor is supporting Wilson were present.

It is not so much that we are for Wilson as that Wilson is for us, read one sign. The president's slogan went rapidly as possible.

Al Friedman and Keyser, W. Va., shook hands with persons at the stations. A group of students sang a song as his train entered in station. The president let the singing, keeping time with both arms.

That's all," he said as the president added: "It sounds like old time to me."

PROBATE NOMINEES WILL GO TO VOTERS AS AT FIRST NAMED

Virtually Definite Announcement Made That Republicans, Like Democrats, Will Stick to Their Candidate; Lucero's Proposal.

What appeared to be a definite announcement that the lawmen have given up hope of having the Republicans choose their candidate for governor under the authority of the state constitution was announced by two commissioners who announced the law commission this week and it was suggested that the Republicans might as well give up the idea of getting the office of governor. Before the commissioners could get together, however, the Republicans chose their own nomination and were fully informed that their candidate was regarded as a good man and a capable one and would be elected if he got the nomination. They had no objection to the nomination of the Republicans for governor, but they did not know that the Republicans had chosen a candidate of their own.

It was said that lawmen expected to receive the nomination of the Republicans for governor, but they did not know that the Republicans had chosen a candidate of their own.
